

Christmas Week Adventures...

Well we stayed up all night (at least that is what everyone who was on shift said) and we never seen Santa. The treats we left out were gone in the morning. However, we think Snoopy snacked as he said he was not hungry at breakfast. He said he never ate anything - right. Anyway, we had a great Christmas. Playing upstairs with the big guys and watching Grams and Gramps throwing paper all over the place. Humans do weird things.

More training this week. Gads it will be good to get to our new homes and have a rest. We come right up to the door now using the ramp and just today started using the narrow ramps. We have gotten to play in part of the parking lot under the watchful eye of Grams. We are eating larger size kibble with no milk - just water. All the five crates are in the nursery now and Mom's crate is gone. No more midnight milk run - that part we really miss. We told the humans we would go to the corgi union - they just laughed. Anyway, we like having our own room. There is no door on the crate, so we can come and go as we please. We sure like to eat having three meals a day. We get treats before we go to bed. We also have baby chew sticks to munch on. We are having lots of snot fights with each other. Oh yes snot fights are what we call them - the humans call it playing.

We also got stuck in our back. Gramps said he microchipped us (whatever that is). It hurt, and we told them so. It was alright afterwards as they snuggled us - soon we had forgotten everything.

The big, big news is we have found out where are forever homes are going to be. We were filled with excitement waiting for our humans to make the announcement. When it came we chatted amongst ourselves about the news. We had tons of questions. We even asked if we could use the internet to find out more stuff. Gramps said no way he is was going to let us touch his computer. We are thinking maybe we should write letters or stuff like that. We will talk about it more when we go to bed tonight and make a plan...

So, until next week we hope you enjoy your visit with us...
