

Making a Social Call...

Well, here we are again. The week just flew by. It was very cold for us this week. Gramps said it went down to -37°C Monday night. The big guys got us aside and told us how to do power pees and poo. Good thing they told us! As soon as we went outside, we could feel the cold. We never moved so fast to do our business. We were finished before Toby and Bubs. We had to wait for the big guys before we got to go back in the house.

It has finally started to warm up. It is now minus 14. Gramps says it is a heat wave. He wanted to get his shorts out. Grams said no, and that was the end of them talking about it. We think Gramps likes to get Grams going.

We went to town and visited the vet clinic on Thursday. We had loads of fun in the car. We learned early from Mom that car rides are great. The clinic is a strange place with many different smells and strange looking people wearing funny looking clothes and all. Grams said the visit was to introduce us socially so in the future we would know that it is a good place. Toby told the guys "watch out they don't snip you". We don't know what he is talking about. He did sound serious though.

When it warmed up to -32, we got brave and taught ourselves how to climb the steps to the door. Griffin told Max to go first. We think he said that because Max would bounce down the stairs if he didn't make it. Once Max did it then of course we all had to climb them. It was harder then what we were used to.

Otherwise we had a normal week of exploring, playing, getting a bath, nails trimmed and cuddling. We think everyone was trying to stay warm. The big guys only went outside to do their jobs. That meant we had to put up with them playing with our stuff.

So, until next week we hope you enjoy your visit with us...
